

ity to the public to clearly show where every project in their application exists and what areas will be affected.

Invenergy, planning what will certainly be one of the largest projects in Greenbrier County's history, insults us with this tiny box of scribbling.

I have looked at this little 4" x 3.75" box from every angle and I cannot make heads or tails of it. Can you? They have not even included a scale! What are we looking at ... ten miles, one mile, 100 miles?

It is just wrong that Invenergy has so little respect for the good citizens of Greenbrier County that they cannot take out a full page ad and supply readers with a legible map to explain where they will be building their 124 forty-story tall wind turbines. If we can't understand them how can we trust them?

Invenergy's unreasonable map

Dear Editor:

On Nov. 9 and 21, the Invenergy wind turbine company published a SMALL Notice of Filing in the West Virginia Daily News which contained the most absurd attempt at a map I have ever seen!

Whenever a coal company is required to publish a map they offer a legible document that any citizen can read so I know it's not the fault of the newspaper. Coal companies know they have a legal responsibil-
